Google+ - A social network that works a bit like Twitter or LinkedIn. You will need to set up a profile in Google+ to use some of the new services.

- Privacy Settings - you can control who sees what information on Google+.
 - <http://guides.kentlaw.iit.edu/googleplus>
- Customized Contacts - create circles to organize your connections and customize who can see your profile details.

Google Hangouts - a web meeting application. You can meet with up to 10 other people, share your screen, and record your session. You can even stream your session live over YouTube.

Google Groups - generally used as a “listserv” or email list. Until now, CK users couldn’t join groups created outside of CK. Now we can join Google Groups from anywhere.

Books - create your own “virtual library.” Use Google Books to create lists of sources that you have consulted (or plan to consult) or to search inside over 30 million scanned books.

- Learn about advanced search tools and books you can download:

News - customize your own news page with the topics and news sources that interest you.

Maps - save maps and your favorite locations to streamline map searches.

Picasa - create online photo albums to share over the web.
