THE NEW

Another college year has commenced, and, we may say, very auspiciously too. Chicago-Kent College of Law is happy to welcome the Class of 1930 to its ranks. The new class, from early indications, gives promise of being one of the most outstanding aggregations of law students ever registered at the College. Without any reflection whatever on the qualities of the upper classmen, we feel called upon to express the opinion that the calibre of men and women entering upon the study of law is becoming better and better as time goes on. This is as it should be. Where there is no progress or improvement there is bound to be decay. And so we say to the New Class; We wish you well on your journey toward the goal.

DEBATE

At this season, the annual tryouts for places on Chicago-Kent's varsity debating teams are held in the different classes. Without going into detail regarding the enormous value of this type of training to the lawyer, we sincerely urge every man (and woman, too) who feels that he or she has any aptitude along forensic lines to come out and make a bid for a place on the teams. It is no small accomplishment for one to win the right to represent the College in one of the intercollegiate debates. In addition, an opportunity exists for the debaters to engage in radio contests and thus receive training in the modern way of disseminating information. In short, the advantages to be gained are too numerous to mention. Again we urge that all who possibly can should arrange to compete in these preliminary tryouts.

THE REVIEW

As this issue goes to press, it marks the beginning of another year for the Chicago-Kent Review. Any measure of success which may have attended the efforts of those who edit this publication is due, in large part, to the cooperation of the faculty and student body. May we hope for the same hearty support this year as we have had in the past? If you know of any event or happening which may be of interest to the student body or alumni in general, please do not fail to get it into the hands of some member of the staff. All such contributions are appreciated and go far toward accomplishing the aim of the Review.
