In connection with the work being done by Frederick A. Rowe, '92 in gathering data concerning the organization and history of Chicago-Kent College of Law, Mr. Rowe is especially desirous of securing the cooperation of alumni. Any alumnus who has in his possession any documents, catalogues, schedules, or records of any kind giving information concerning the early history of the College is sincerely requested to send them to Mr. Rowe at Room 1915, 123 W. Madison St., Chicago. This appeal is directed particularly to members of the early classes who are asked to communicate any information or recollections they may have to Mr. Rowe.

Commencement exercises for the classes of February and June 1934, were held Monday evening, June 11 at the Goodman Theater. Former Supreme Court Justice Floyd E. Thompson, president of the Illinois State Bar Association for the year past, delivered the commencement address. Judge Thompson took for his subject "The Lawyer's Place In American Life" and the address was delivered in his usual forceful manner. After sketching the place of the lawyer in history and in modern civilization, Judge Thompson made a vigorous attack on both lawyers and laymen who endeavor to hold up to ridicule the legal profession because of the shortcomings of a few of its members.

A total of one hundred thirty-four students received degrees, including those from the post graduate department.
The Forty-Seventh Annual Homecoming Luncheon of the Chicago-Kent Union was held Monday, June 11, 1934, at the Hamilton Club of Chicago. The Ways and Means Committee of the Union had made special efforts to secure as large an attendance from the various classes as possible. More than five hundred alumni were present at the luncheon and it was estimated that over one hundred were turned away because all available places at the tables in the main dining room of the Hamilton Club were filled.

Many individual classes availed themselves of the opportunity afforded by the luncheon to hold class reunions. It is believed that this was one of the most successful Homecoming Luncheons ever held.

Many alumni who live at a distance and were unable to attend, wrote to express their regrets. Letters were received from the following among others: Edwin I. Felsenthal, '89, Cleveland, Ohio; E. E. Lindsay, '95, Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Tuscarawas County, New Philadelphia, Ohio; Brigadier General Edward H. White, '97; N. I. Barry, '10, Hamilton, Ohio; Paul W. Kaiser, '26, Waukegan, Illinois; and Marvin F. Burt, '31, Freeport, Illinois.

At the April meeting Dr. Sydney S. Greenspahn spoke on the importance of the preparation of medical evidence, and its presentation. He stressed the need for cooperation between the doctor and the lawyer.

At the annual meeting in May, Professor Charles C. Pickett, Director of Round Table, was the speaker and entertained the members with anecdotes drawn from his fifty years of experience in legal work. At this meeting the following officers were elected: Director, Professor Charles C. Pickett; Assistant Director, Professor Roger L. Severns; Secretary, John B. Moore; Executive Committee, K. W. Munsert, W. J. Wahler, E. J. Friedrich, W. A. Simon, J. W. Cavanaugh, J. R. Peterson, E. O. Donnelly, N. T. Leiber.
