do not begin with the statutes. The collection of cases is based upon the provisions of the federal statute. The footnotes, while not meager, might have been expanded along the line of the notes of Professor Powell in his case book on Future Interests with a special reference to the formulation of questions on the cases to be solved by the students.

This is a second edition of Mr. Freund's valuable collection of cases on this subject. While it is not practical in an ordinary law school to give a considerable amount of time to this subject and while the work might be done to better advantage in a school of political science, yet in many cases questions are presented upon which the court is forced to act in the first instance particularly where the question is one of ordinary legal remedy.

Considerable attention is given to the subject of administrative discretion, notice and hearing of acts to be done by administrative offices, the necessary proof of official acts and the presumptions which arise upon the hearing.

There is a very full consideration of the cases dealing with actions to recover money back, and relief by injunction and mandamus.

The distinguishing characteristic of this last edition, to the increasing literature of case books on the subject of damages is the treatment of the modern development of the subject.

The events of recent years, such as the use of motor vehicles, the World War with its consequent fluctuation of the values of real estate and commodities, have produced interesting cases for the application of old precedents to the new facts. There is almost an entire absence of footnote material and this is to be much regretted.

An attempt has been made in this book to deal with the subject of suretyship with special reference to those schools in which the time given this subject is considerably limited. Much matter has been omitted which is commonly dealt with in other collections of cases on this subject.

There is, with the exception of the statute of frauds, no cases on the formation of the contract of suretyship.

While the modern decisions have not been used to any large extent a large use of lecture periodical references has been made.

Round Table

The regular monthly meeting of the members of the Round Table was held on Saturday, October 6th, at the Electric Club at 30 North Dearborn Street. Luncheon was served at 2:00 P. M. in the main dining room.

This being the first meeting of the year no regular program had been arranged and the meeting was devoted to business and the outlining of a program for the year.

Since the organization of the Round Table twenty of its members have graduated from school and their place is being taken by other members of the Junior and Senior classes, who meet with the requirements for admission. The twelve new members are the following: C. L. Browning, J. J. Chapman, Eric Collins, D. E. Emerson, C. C. Kirshbaum, J. C. Lamy, E. F. McCabe, W. W. Planke, R. S. Schultz, H. H. Stilley, C. B. Thomas, M. C. Van Alyea.

The following were elected as members of the Executive Committee: Judge Picknett, Director; Charles H. Edwards, Chairman and Secretary; Peter Wahl, Alumni member of the Executive Committee, and as assistants; N. W. Stoinescu, Myer Balin and George Stevens, representatives of the senior class, and J. R. Hemingway, E. Collins and C. C. Kirshbaum, Junior class.

The Round Table as a unit went on record by pledging its support to all activities and movements having as their objects the advancement and betterment of Chicago-Kent College of Law.
